

"Beyond Boundaries:
Embracing Diversity for a More Inclusive Education"

Human rights are directly linked to inclusion, Racism and diversity for that matter, different is often scary or so we think. Prejudices do not allow a person to live with dignity and freedom. Why deprive our society of this? Let's accept the different as an opportunity to discover new worlds, and to expand our horizons and not as a generalized threat. Stereotypes trap the person in a 'truth'. And this is because they illuminate only one aspect of reality and cast their shadow on other sides. Thus the individual becomes complacent, the spiritual horizons narrow, the truth is lost and a conservatism prevails in all its expressions (social, political, etc.). Let's be open to personal interaction with people who belong to groups other than ourselves and evaluate the information they give us even if it doesn't match the stereotype we have in mind. Let's give ourselves and others opportunities to enrich our knowledge and not only focus on our differences but also on our similarities.
